A Shared Promise for a Festival of Peace and Hospitality

The DMZ International Documentary Film Festival is a celebration where people from different languages, cultures, experiences, and perspectives come together and connect through documentary films. Just as documentaries open new ways of seeing and understanding the world, we hope this festival will be a welcoming space where people meet one another with respect and openness. To create a festival where everyone can participate safely and express themselves freely, we would like to share the following commitments:

We will:

- Meet one another with respect and recognize each person as an equal.
- Refrain from discrimination based on race, gender, sexual orientation, language, age, disability, religion, region or country of origin, socioeconomic background, or any other characteristic.
- Avoid any behavior or language that may make others feel uncomfortable or threatened, including sexual harassment and hate speech.
- Respect differences in thoughts and experiences, and listen to one another with openness and empathy.
- Refrain from unwanted photography, recording, or any form of online or offline harassment.
- Not abuse positions of authority or influence to make unfair demands or exert undue pressure.
- Respect personal privacy and protect personal information, and never share it without consent.
- Value and respect the efforts and contributions of everyone who helps make this festival possible.

The DMZ International Documentary Film Festival is a festival that celebrates the values of peace, life, and communication. Together, we seek to create a festival where differences are respected, hospitality is naturally shared, and new encounters and meaningful conversations can flourish.

This commitment is a small pledge to help ensure that everyone enjoys a more meaningful and enriching experience. We kindly ask for the warm support and cooperation of all participants.

Documentary films are like the nameless fighters who fell in the independence struggle in Manchuria under Japanese colonial rule. Without them, our history could never have been properly recorded.

The DMZ International Documentary Film Festival serves as a kind of "Shinheung Military Academy"—the school that trained Korea's independence fighters in Manchuria—for documentary filmmakers: those who struggle to record our times and work toward a more just world. It is a festival that seeks to speak for those left devastated by war and ecological destruction, and to gather once more the power for change through works that might yet save the world. This year, we have again prepared a rich selection: 144 films from 52 countries. These are works that reflect on the problems of our era and search for ways to confront them. Moving beyond ideological divides, each film invites us to look squarely at how war and ecological crisis, human rights, discrimination against sexual minorities, and issues of race and ethnicity are interwoven like the warp and weft of a single fabric.

The power of cinema—the power of documentary—is truly great. I firmly believe that, like a single spark capable of setting a vast plain ablaze, a single documentary can shake the world. And yet it is also true that the path by which documentaries reach you grows ever narrower. They are being turned away from theaters, and broadcasters grow reluctant to schedule them. I would venture to say that it is precisely at such a moment that the importance of the DMZ International Documentary Film Festival must grow greater than ever.

Our festival will be a reservoir for documentary filmmakers in Korea and around the world. We will stand as their steadfast supporters. This requires budgets, organization, and systems. Yet something matters more still: people, and spirit. The first element of everything is the presence of all of you who gather here. The truest force sustaining a festival is the power of its audience: watching the films, loving and cherishing the festival, and taking pride in it. I ask you to look closely at the 140-odd films we have prepared.

The heat waves and torrential rains continue, but do not be deterred—I earnestly ask you to flock to the theaters. Stand by this 18th edition, and help us carry the festival on to its 19th, its 20th, and far beyond.

Thank you.

OH Dong-jin
Festival Director,
DMZ International Documentary Film Festival

It is my great pleasure to welcome you. I am Min Kyungsun, Vice Chairperson of the DMZ International Documentary Film Festival and Mayor of Goyang City.

The curtain has risen on the 18th DMZ International Documentary Film Festival, which continues to establish itself as one of Asia's leading documentary festivals and as a platform connecting Korea with the world. First and foremost, I would like to express my deepest gratitude to the festival staff, organizing committee members, and volunteers for their passion and dedication, as well as to the audiences who offer their enthusiastic support each year and to filmmakers from around the world.

The DMZ International Documentary Film Festival has grown beyond the walls of the cinema into an invaluable cultural forum for sharing the values of peace, democracy, and human rights with the world. This year's slogan, "Peace Is Not Silent," reminds us that genuine peace begins when we refuse to turn away from the pain and truths of our world and choose instead to raise our voices. I hope this year's festival will become just such a voice—compassionate yet powerful.

Goyang will add its strength to that voice. Drawing on the city's extensive broadcasting and audiovisual infrastructure, we will continue to expand a cultural and content-industry ecosystem that connects creation, production, and distribution, enabling creators to pursue their visions freely and citizens to fully enjoy the fruits of their work. Through these efforts, we will continue to grow together with the festival.

I hope the 18th DMZ International Documentary Film Festival leaves a lasting resonance in the hearts of its audiences, and that you will fully experience the sincere voices of our time conveyed through the screen.

MIN Kyungsun
Vice Chairperson,
DMZ International Documentary Film Festival

I extend my warmest welcome to everyone joining us for the 18th DMZ International Documentary Film Festival. I am Son Baechan, Vice Chairperson of the DMZ International Documentary Film Festival and Mayor of Paju.

Here in Paju, home to the DMZ and the values of peace and coexistence it embodies, we once again gather to confront the questions of our time through documentary cinema. Beginning with the opening ceremony at Paju Book City on September 10, this seven-day festival will offer a meaningful cultural celebration where filmmakers, citizens, and audiences can come together to reflect on the value and significance of documentary film and share their perspectives and experiences.

Paju is a city that bears the painful history of national division, while also moving toward a future of peace and mutual prosperity. Today, the DMZ is evolving beyond a space of separation and tension into one of new possibilities, where culture and the arts, ecology, and tourism come together. The DMZ International Documentary Film Festival has established itself as a leading cultural festival that shares these values with the world.

I hope this year's festival will provide a meaningful opportunity for filmmakers, citizens, and audiences to exchange perspectives and deepen their sense of empathy. I also hope that everyone visiting Paju will take the opportunity to experience the city's diverse cultural and tourist attractions—including the DMZ, Imjingak, and Paju Book City—and discover "Paju, Where Peace Stays and the Economy Flows."

Finally, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to Chairperson Choo Mi-ae, Executive Committee Chair Oh Dong-jin, and everyone whose dedication has made this festival possible.

As summer draws to a close, I hope the 18th DMZ International Documentary Film Festival will offer us a meaningful moment to look anew at our society and imagine a better tomorrow together.

Thank you.

SON Baechan
Vice Chairperson,
DMZ International Documentary Film Festival

Greetings. I am Han Sang-jun, Chairperson of the Korean Film Council (KOFIC). It is a pleasure to welcome documentary filmmakers from Korea and around the world, as well as all the audiences joining us for the 18th DMZ International Documentary Film Festival.

I offer my heartfelt congratulations on the opening of the 18th DMZ International Documentary Film Festival. Documentary is more than a genre that simply records facts. It is a cinematic art form that connects people, listens closely to voices we might otherwise overlook, and raises new questions about the future. Even amid today's rapidly changing media environment, the authenticity and public value of documentary cinema have become more meaningful than ever.

Over the past eighteen years, the DMZ International Documentary Film Festival has grown into a vital forum for communication and understanding, documenting our times through documentary cinema, reflecting on the many realities confronting our society and the world, and bringing people into dialogue with one another. The slogan of the 18th festival, "Peace Is Not Silent," succinctly expresses the role documentary cinema can play in addressing society and the world today. I hope the approximately 140 documentaries presented this year will encourage us to reflect once again on the values of peace and coexistence, while offering us the courage and hope to better understand one another.

The Korean Film Council will continue to devote its efforts to fostering the sustainable development of the documentary filmmaking ecosystem, supporting the production and distribution of outstanding works, and creating an environment in which filmmakers can pursue new challenges with greater freedom. We will also continue to stand with the DMZ International Documentary Film Festival as it takes another step toward becoming one of the world's leading documentary film festivals.

I hope all those attending the festival will find their time here both meaningful and deeply moving.

Thank you.

HAN Sang-jun
Chairperson, Korean Film Council (KOFIC)

Festival Identity

Slogan

“Peace Is Not Silent”

Some insist that war is inevitable, while others remain silent before its horrors. But we must stand together—with the courage to bear witness and the resolve to act in solidarity. Documentary cinema must record suffering, break the silence, and actively invoke peace through testimony. Peace is not a quiet disguise. Peace will never be silent.

Logo

Documentary cinema’s distinctive sense of the real rests on the many stories found in the universal lives we all share. The logo of the DMZ International Documentary Film Festival begins with a simple square, yet takes on new forms through its combination with other geometric shapes. As these elements are born anew and connect, the logo expands into a graphic language that stands for the festival. Its comfortable and intuitive forms also carry the festival’s will to move beyond the seriousness a documentary film festival conveys and to reach a wider audience.

Poster

The cracks and ruptures in the letters carved into the tiles symbolize a moment that does not remain in silence, but instead gives voice in the direction of peace. The shattered fragments are traces of testimony and utterance—marks left by the effort to confront truths that had long remained concealed. This breaking signifies a dynamic process that disrupts stillness and continues to cry out through the gaps. In doing so, it becomes a voice for change and for peace, directed at realities in our society that have been turned away from and left in silence. It also reveals the stance of documentary cinema: to record, to bear witness, and to keep asking questions.

Haje

HWANG Yun
South Korea | 2026 | 125min | DCP | Color | World Premiere | 12
Haje follows eight years in a fishing village in Gunsan where the Saemangeum reclamation project and the expansion of a U.S. military base brought waves of forced displacement, destroying human and nonhuman ecosystems alike. Hwang Yun has pursued these concerns with remarkable consistency in Silent Forest (2004), One Day on the Road (2006), An Omnivorous Family’s Dilemma (2014), and Sura: A Love Song (2023). A sequel to Sura, Haje traces the collapse of a once-utopian community, the expulsion of its residents, and the village’s eventual demise, affirming the values of life, peace, and care.

The film’s heartrending search for solidarity, renewal, and coexistence against the imperatives of industry and military logistics addresses one of the defining concerns of our time. With the assurance of a veteran filmmaker, Hwang summons the spirits wandering through the wasteland Haje has become, stands beside those fighting to recover the beauty of communal life, and tenaciously records nonhuman beings as they disappear. Images of the ecosystem one can hardly imagine capturing—toads, birds, and insects rendered in exquisite detail—hold a beauty of their own. Rooted in the present rather than nostalgia, Haje moves toward an inclusive future that humanity must embrace together.

Che Guevara: The Last Companions

Christophe Dimitri RÉVEILLE
France | 2026 | 98min | DCP | Color / B&W | Korean Premiere | 12
Che Guevara’s legacy is known throughout the world, and some may also know how he died. Far fewer know the devoted guerrillas who fought beside him. Che Guevara: The Last Companions revisits one of the twentieth century’s most enduring myths from an unexpected angle. Rather than centering on Che as Latin America’s model revolutionary, Christophe Dimitri Réveille turns to the members of his guerrilla unit who escaped the Valley of Death after the failed 1967 campaign in Bolivia.

Réveille spent more than twenty years tracking down and recording the survivors, many of whom speak on camera for the first time. Combining rare archival footage, intimate interviews, and animated reconstructions of their journey through Bolivia’s mountains and jungles, the film vividly revives a little-known chapter of history. Premiered in the Special Screenings section at this year’s Cannes Film Festival, Che Guevara: The Last Companions is less a political portrait than a human story of friendship, survival, resolve, and memory. Strikingly, Réveille maintains a distance from the men’s revolutionary convictions. Yet, as the three survivors make clear, those beliefs were once their entire world—something for which they were prepared to give their lives.

International Competition

The International Competition lies at the heart of the DMZ International Documentary Film Festival and reveals its curatorial direction. Comprising new works making their Asian premiere or above, the selection also represents the present and future of documentary cinema. These nine bold, pioneering, and courageous films confront the threat the climate crisis poses to life, along with war, inequality, discrimination, and violence in many forms. Spanning a wide range of regions, terrains, and modes of documentary practice, they aim to surprise and delight audiences and industry professionals alike.

Some call for action on the world’s most urgent issues; others follow people resisting the contradictions of tradition or everyday life, or celebrate alternative ways of living beyond conventional standards. Together, they relay the positions documentary filmmakers take before the complexities of the world. Power relations shaped by race, gender, and class form another central thread, illuminating how structures of domination operate on individuals and on entire communities. These refined cinematic inquiries into challenging subjects have captivated audiences at leading festivals worldwide and bear full witness to the audiovisual and narrative possibilities of documentary cinema.

Frontier Competition

Frontier, a competition running parallel to the International Competition and devoted to new international documentaries, seeks to present original approaches in contemporary documentary cinema. The eight selected films answer the program’s ideal of an evolving, self-renewing medium, drawing attention to the originality of their forms as much as to the subjects they address. What decides a film’s place here is therefore not polished craft but each filmmaker’s perspective and attitude toward the documentary medium. Underlying this selection is the belief that content and position—cultural, artistic, and political questions alike—take on greater meaning only through their interaction with artistic form.

This year’s Frontier introduces perspectives that venture into documentary storytelling, test the limits of convention, and redefine the relationship between record and reality. Across essays, road movies, found footage, fictional reimaginings of history, musical reconstruction, and compelling forms of dialogue, no trace of habit remains. We hope these frontiers of our time will evoke the contemporary context of documentary practice, engage with sociopolitical currents, and bring the pleasure of discovery across many eras, languages, and styles.

Fordlândia Panacea
Susana de SOUSA DIAS
Portugal | 2025 | 66min | DCP | Color / B&W | Asian Premiere | 12
Often described as a “ghost town” and a failed utopia envisioned by Henry Ford, the Amazonian company town founded in 1928 is neither truly utopian nor abandoned. It remains a place shaped by the lives, memories, and everyday rhythms of its residents. The ghosts that linger here are not myths but enduring historical forces—Ford, capitalism, and extractivism. By confronting the blind spots of this history, the narrative reveals how past and present remain deeply entangled, and how these spectral legacies continue to shape the town and the communities that inhabit it.

The filmmaker brings three of them into conversation, threading Humboldt’s words through present-day lives: urban activists greening neglected neighbourhoods, scientists scanning redwood forests, and hunters returning bighorn sheep to protected land. Across landscapes, one question endures: what remains of his vision of “interconnectedness”?

Korean Competition

This year’s Korean Competition at the DMZ International Documentary Film Festival presents nine features and ten shorts. Korean documentarians confront reality from the front line of expression, each practicing a politics of images in their own way. The selected films fracture the apparent calm of reality and penetrate beneath its surface, refusing silence and stillness. Especially striking are works born from rigorous self-reflection. This is not a retreat into the past or an attempt at self-consolation, but a reflective adventure that renews the present by passing willingly through memories and scars rather than around them. Leaving safe ground and shedding their own protective layers, these filmmakers accept the risk of facing themselves and the world anew.

Within this current, the strong presence of women documentarians emerges as one of the defining signs of this year’s selection. The shorts, meanwhile, assert new cinematic languages through bold formal experiments and variations. Moving across memory and place, family and community, humans and nonhumans, life and death, these diverse interventions expand the possibilities of speculative documentary and map the coordinates toward which contemporary Korean documentary is moving.

JANG Yerim
South Korea | 2025 | 65min | DCP | Color | World Premiere | 15
In 1948, a red wave rose. From Yeosu to Busan, the filmmaker traces lives and memories layered along the sea. The Yeosu-Suncheon Incident erupted when soldiers stationed in Yeosu refused orders to suppress the Jeju 4·3 uprising, and many civilians were killed during the Rhee Syngman government's crackdown. After the Korean War began, the government branded National Guidance Alliance members as communists and carried out massacres nationwide. Beyond the killing sites in both cities lies the sea, along which state violence flowed from Yeosu to Busan.

Who Does the Chores?

Soram
South Korea | 2026 | 88min | DCP | Color | World Premiere | 12
Soram visits her aging grandmother, who prepares dinner while struggling to breathe. Years later, after leaving home and taking on housework for the first time, she begins to understand the weight of "domestic labor." Reflecting on the invisible work carried by her mother and grandmother for decades, she questions how housework is divided, valued, and gendered. Through conversations with friends and care workers, she discovers the reality of domestic labor: essential to sustaining life, yet still unequally distributed.

This partly animated, music-accompanied non-fiction film follows the filmmaker's grandfather, the last resident of a once lively farmhouse, hospitalized shortly before filming. To fulfill his wish to return home, she places a miniature figure of him on a remote-controlled vehicle modeled after his old four-wheeler, letting it roam through the empty house and fields. Narration and handwritten notes weave together family memories, traces of rural transformation, and the fragile bond between absence and remembrance.

If Mom had been able to hear well, would I still have fallen in love with cinema?" I used to feel ashamed of the strange speech patterns and facial expressions that surfaced only when communicating with my mother. Cinema was the new language I chose to break free from her will and claim my independence. Using film as my reason, I stopped acting as her surrogate, and only then did her world slowly come into view. Yet, our communication remains trapped in a cycle of misunderstandings and missed connections.

Verite

Verite presents films shaped by documentary’s long traditions and enduring conventions. In an age overwhelmed by biased, fragmented images—from AI to short-form video—can cinema still embody truth? Is documentary still the form that can strip away feigned and hollow voices to come closest to reality? The films in this year’s Verite section hold that belief as a working premise. Bringing to the surface truths long buried beneath the surface of power and deep within institutions, they refuse to accept reality as given and venture into its latent territories as a radical practice.

In the face of war and the climate crisis, colonial legacies and borders, the thresholds of death and separation, life does not stop. These films understand survival not as mere instinct but as an indomitable will to preserve the continuity of life—a desire to reconnect the world through community, memory, labor, and ritual. Hands recording glaciers, journeys to bring ancestors home, silences before borders, labor that tills the soil, filmmakers who will not lower their cameras amid war: all converge on the elemental act of sustaining life against disappearance. Within humanity’s elemental will to persistently seek the truth, Verite senses a glimmer of hope yet to come.

The Life We Leave

Docufiction

Docufiction presents nine films that explore the relations between documentary and fiction, reality and invention, objectivity and subjectivity, record and reenactment. Engaging with people, biography, history, and memory, these works combine the conveyance of information with the emotional and narrative appeal of fiction, aiming to render history and real events more compelling for audiences. Unbound by the calling of factual representation, they boldly employ fantasy, animation, performance, and the reconstruction of records. Actors may portray real figures, situations may depart from actuality, and personal views of historical events are expressed without hesitation.

Some films may provoke controversy through the filmmaker’s willed intervention or the distortion of reality. Facts emphasized, simplified, or reshaped for narrative purposes can raise ethical questions about the integrity of information. Despite the criticism they invite, reenactment and reconstruction continue to spread and attract attention because they can open deeper perspectives on personal, social, and political concerns. By heightening empathy, tension, and immersion, these films lead us into new territories of contemporary documentary cinema.

We Are the Fruits of the Forest

Essay

Essay is not a closed system that defines a fixed genre. Drawing on the many auteurist forms cinema has accumulated, the section presents documentaries closer to thought experiments, works that continually provoke and renew perception and reflection. Rather than proving objective truths, these films inscribe the trajectory of thought on screen; rather than offering closed narratives, they record the movement by which questions take shape. Contemporary essay films do not describe the world in linear terms but organize new sensations and meanings in the gaps where image and sound, memory and history, the personal and the social collide.

This year’s Essay section brings together cinematic voices from around the world, each describing the world in a style of their own. They do not reduce history and politics, cities and landscapes, labor and art to grand discourses. Instead, they follow family memories and everyday conversations, an actor’s gestures and the process of making, digital images and chance encounters, rewriting the world in their own idiom. Beginning from personal sensibility, these explorations bring us face to face anew with wounds and love, identity and power, and the layers of memory. The section becomes a cinematic site where complex yet supple ways of looking at the world collide and resonate.

Ruth BECKERMANN

Austria, Italy | 2026 | 97min | DCP | Color / B&W | Korean Premiere | 12

Built by Emperor Haile Selassie at the dawn of Africa’s pivotal 1960s, the Hilton Addis Ababa remains a monument to his vision of progress and power’s self-image. From a hotel room, Ruth Beckermann traces Ethiopia’s fractured history through archival footage, encounters in the lobby, and reflections on her position as a European woman in Africa. Moving between fact and fiction, the familiar and the foreign, her search uncovers contradictions rather than certainty. Outside, workers wait for buses beneath unfinished towers, exposing the gulf between the hotel’s splendor and the city’s harsh reality.

In Algiers, a writer sets out to map the city through its jacaranda trees, whose purple blossoms arrived from Latin America. Accompanying him, his filmmaker son turns the journey into an intimate portrait of memory and place. As the father’s stories unfold, they form a loving dictionary of the city, while the intertwined perspectives of father and son become a story of inheritance and transmission.

King Hamlet

Elvira LIND

USA, Denmark | 2025 | 89min | DCP | Color | Asian Premiere | 12

With King Hamlet, filmmaker Elvira Lind once again turns the camera on her own family, continuing her exploration of the intersection between art and life. The film follows her husband, Oscar Isaac, as he prepares to play Shakespeare’s Hamlet at New York’s Public Theater during a period marked by the birth of their first child and the sudden death of Oscar’s mother. An actor’s process becomes a meditation on love, grief, and the porous boundary between performance and private life.

UK | 2026 | 87min | DCP | Color | Asian Premiere | 19

An intimate portrait of the celebrated British artist Douglas Gordon, whose installation of the iconic shower scene from Alfred Hitchcock’s Psycho (1960) in the white cube brought him international acclaim. As the border between reality and performance blurs, the shifting relationship between filmmaker and subject calls into question who is actually making the film.

Filip GRUJIĆ, Aleksa BORKOVIĆ

Serbia, Croatia | 2026 | 87min | DCP | Color | Asian Premiere | 15

Four millennials from Belgrade, Serbia cross the United States in a Yugo, an old Yugoslav car once considered the worst car ever in the United States. They travel through 24 states from New York City to Los Angeles to find the answer to one question: what does it mean to be the worst? Along the way, they explore their roots, meet fellow Yugo lovers, and uncover the unexpected ways a forgotten car connects two distant worlds.

Expanded

Expanded is a section devoted to expanded cinema, conceived in response to contemporary documentary’s exploration of its own boundaries. Here “expansion” is understood not as a legacy of experimental avant-garde film culture but as an effort to reposition the diversity of documentary practice within the context of contemporary cinema. Aiming to ignite inquiry into the relationship between digital technology and documentary language, Expanded encourages experiments that move between the screen and adjacent media, continually widening the horizons of documentary discourse.

This year’s Expanded comprises one feature and nine shorts, united by their refusal to confine themselves to any single category. Moving among music, poetry, painting, games, and AI, these artists dismantle received ideas and broaden how we understand media and genre. The lineup includes filmmakers already connected with DMZ Docs—Viktoria Schmid (NYC RGB) and Ekiem Barbier, Guilhem Causse, and Quentin L’Helgoualc’h (Knit’s Island)—alongside widely known auteurs Joshua Oppenheimer, Ben Russell, and Dane Komljen, and the latest work of internationally acclaimed visual artists Karla Condado and Tulapop Saenjaroen. It promises much for audiences seeking an expanded experience of the medium.

Kamal Aljafari:

The Image Struggle for

Cinematic Justice

Palestinian visual artist and filmmaker Kamal Aljafari (b. 1972) has spent over two decades exploring the meaning of forgotten and abandoned places and the politics of memory and preservation. This retrospective surveys a singular body of work forged through cinema’s struggle to recover Palestine’s erased histories. Within cultural forms of representation such as cinema, Aljafari addresses the erasure of Palestinians not only as a historical and political question but also as an aesthetic one. How might a counter-occupation resisting occupation—a “cinematic justice”—be possible? The concept lies at the center of his thinking on film. His Jaffa Trilogy—The Roof (2006), Port of Memory (2009), and Recollection (2015)—examines erasure, destruction, removal, and expulsion as evidence of Israeli colonial violence against Palestinian cities. His films explore the possibilities of poetic and interpretive images, are accompanied by an inventive use of sound, and have opened a new era in archival practice. His recent A Fidai Film (2024) and With Hasan in Gaza (2025) rework and reinterpret found footage to reorganize and subvert colonial territory.

The retrospective presents thirteen films, from Visit Iraq (2003), made while he was studying at the Academy of Media Arts Cologne, to his latest works, Going Home (2026) and Masao Adachi Takes a Passport Photo (2026). Going Home will have its world premiere at the DMZ Docs, and Masao Adachi Takes a Passport Photo will make its Asian debut following its world premiere at the Toronto International Film Festival. Aljafari will attend the festival to give a masterclass and to talk about each of the films screened.

The Roof
Kamal ALJAFARI
Palestine, Germany | 2006 | 62min | DCP | Color | 12
This deceptively quiet film portrays Aljafari’s family in Ramleh and Jaffa, hovering between documentary and cinematic memoir. A nimble camera moves calmly through inhabited, damaged, and ruined homes. The title refers to the missing roof of the house where the family resettled in 1948, an unfinished home left incomplete. Stillness and off-screen space evoke suspension, waiting, aftermath, and lives lived elsewhere. By casting his own family, Aljafari recalls Robert Bresson’s use of nonprofessional performers, whose presence carries greater weight than performance itself.

Walled-up houses, eviction notices, motionless café customers, a man circling on his scooter while shouting, a sick old woman and her daughter fixed on the television, stray cats, an anxious couple frozen by the certainty of the future, and finally a cemetery overlooking the sea as night falls on the terraces. Kamal Aljafari portrays Palestinian Jaffa as a place steadily closing in on its resigned inhabitants, where the slow repetition of everyday gestures becomes a way of suspending time and postponing the inevitable.

“What are they distributing here?” an old woman asks the young man beside her. “Numbers,” he replies. In Berlin’s waiting rooms, where metal and wooden seats are fixed to the floor, people arrive after crossing the sea. Here they wait. Kamal Aljafari’s short film collapses time, questioning life in a system where humanity is reduced to a number and the future measured by applications filed in grey hallways. This surreal work asks what we have become between our point of origin and today’s bureaucratic maze. It is, indeed, a long way from Amphioxus.

An Unusual Summer

Kamal ALJAFARI
Palestine, Germany | 2020 | 80min | DCP | Color | 12
Following an act of vandalism, the filmmaker’s father installs a surveillance camera to record the scenes unfolding in front of the house. Family life, neighbours going to work, and children heading to school unfold before the lens. In the background, the daily life of the Arab district of Ramla, often called a “ghetto,” emerges. Working with low-definition surveillance footage and subtle sound, Kamal Aljafari transforms a security device into a deeply personal and political portrait of a place, where memory persists despite the erasures of history and time.

The camera’s eye returns obsessively to the same places, a vertical perspective that imposes control, the possession of archaeological sites, stones lying for thousands years in the desert. The places it observes, however, are not deserted: we see, as if glimpsed from afar, the peasants working the land, themselves transformed into landscape. Something disturbs the stillness of the place: explosions on land and in the sea prepare the ground for new cities with new names, new forests. Focus 2. Eco-Documentary: Living Together in Discord

Since the 2000s, debates around the Anthropocene have clearly influenced documentary cinema. Amid an acute climate crisis and development without brakes, humanity keeps repeating the error of destroying its own habitat. The environment is no longer an object of preservation, nor a stable dwelling for human beings. In this crisis of extinction, filmmakers resist the dystopia seen as our inevitable future and seek to reconfigure the ecosystem.

They see nature neither as humanity’s opposite nor as an inviolable realm to protect; they choose instead to be in discord together with it, entering the ecosystem while admitting that what is lost cannot be restored. Restructuring our vertical, human-centered worldview is the most fundamental task before us today. This year the festival programs such practices under the new category of Eco-Documentary, gathering gestures that seek to sense and describe ecology anew under the incommensurable title Living Together in Discord.

The section is grounded in documentaries that emerged with the Anthropocene after 2000: Hamaguchi Ryusuke’s Tohoku Trilogy, Apichatpong Weerasethakul’s hybrid film Mekong Hotel, and major works by Nikolaus Geyrhalter and James Benning, joined by fresh perspectives discovered at recent festivals. Corresponding closely with questions—where is the human, where is the camera, what can cinema do—these fifteen films offer alternative ways of thinking that reconfigure the relations between human and nonhuman, nature and civilization, coexistence and discord.

The Sound of Waves

HAMAGUCHI Ryusuke, SAKAI Ko
Japan | 2011 | 142min | DCP | Color | 12
The first part of a trilogy on northeast Tohoku, co-directed by Sakai Ko and Hamaguchi Ryusuke. Along the Sanriku Coast, repeatedly devastated by tsunamis before the Great East Japan Earthquake of 2011, the directors conduct impromptu interviews with survivors. In conversations between married couples, sisters, workmates, and others bound by close ties, emotion surfaces quietly. For brief moments, fragments of ordinary places and relationships, thought to be gone, return as memories of lost landscapes.

In Ten Skies (2004), James Benning turns his camera upward to present ten overhead landscapes in real time. Filmed in Southern California, each of Benning’s skies is held for ten minutes, forming a minimal portrait of nature. Cloud formations of varying shapes, arrangements, and densities drift across the frame, revealing natural phenomena continually altered and eroded by humankind.

The submerged villages of Andong emerge like a dream. Built in 1970 as part of South Korea’s modernization, the Andong Dam flooded more than 30 villages and displaced 20,000 residents. The waters also submerged Confucian sites associated with scholar Yi Hwang, marking the end of the order that had shaped the Joseon Dynasty for five centuries. Moving between memory and forgetting, sleep and waking, the film reveals a landscape where history continues to surface beneath the present.

Focus 3. Depardon the Witness, or the Cinema of an Archivist Preserving Life

Raymond Depardon, a singular witness to a century of change, is a legendary photographer and documentary filmmaker active since the early 1960s. His documentaries are inseparable from his approach as a photographer, standing alongside his effort to establish the intellectual foundations of photography as a form. Through a creative process of thought exceeding fidelity to the moment, Depardon’s films took in the impulse of journalism while surpassing its limits. Alongside works capturing the dynamics of law enforcement and institutions of confinement, his Profil paysans series turns portraiture—the very subject of his photographic inquiry—into an artistic method, taking as its material the agrarian world at the root of human life.

Les Films du Losange, which manages most of Depardon’s work, has recently restored and remastered his films, bringing forward a comprehensive view of his oeuvre. This archival program focuses on an accomplished body of work while speaking to the archivist’s calling to record and preserve the human faces, labor, and ways of life vanishing under contemporary conditions. Its ten films encompass Depardon’s principal subjects: justice, farmers, and the recorder, or journalist. Marking the 140th anniversary of diplomatic relations between Korea and France, this program is presented with the support of the Cultural Service of the Embassy of France to the Republic of Korea (SCAC) and co-organized with Seoul Art Cinema, which will present the same program as a touring edition in November.

Critics' Choice

Launched last year, Critics’ Choice continues in 2026. The program applies no premiere policy: a committee of three working critics and festival programmers selects around ten features and shorts from Korean documentaries released over the past year at festivals, in theaters, and on streaming platforms. This year’s selection comprises nine features and four shorts. Following last year’s “Essay Era,” the keyword drawn by this year’s committee is “Demo-.” Films recording the landscapes and faces of the December 3 insurrection, perspectives exploring coexistence between humans and nonhumans, and works rethinking one’s relationship with oneself and one’s surroundings all stood out. “Demo-” is a layered concept encompassing demos, the people; demography, a way of thinking about populations and communities; and demonstration, meaning both proof and practice. It frames the many practices through which contemporary Korean documentary names community and world anew, bears witness to reality, and reconfigures relationships. Screenings are accompanied by talks and events—“Forum: Political Documentary Today” and “Critics’ Choice Conversation: The Subject-and-Form Equation in Documentary”—surveying the dynamics that surround documentary. One film chosen by the committee will receive the Critics’ Choice Award. Through Critics’ Choice, the festival seeks to “revisit” Korean documentaries and reignite discourse around them.

Basma al-Sharif:

Far from Palestine, Close to Images

Basma al-Sharif is a Palestinian visual artist and filmmaker. This online retrospective presents ten shorts, from the early We Began by Measuring Distance (2009) to the recent Morning Circle (2025). Moving between cinema screens and white cubes, al-Sharif explores the politics of images, imaginatively constructing images of Palestine from outside its borders and remapping familiar terrain as strange and new. Can an image represent Palestine in any pure form? The politics her work presumes are set in motion by that very impossibility. Born to Palestinian parents and beginning her life in Kuwait, she does not treat Palestine as a primordial homeland demanding desperate return; through film, installation, writing, and photography, she recasts it as a latent landscape, close at hand yet impossible to settle in, always slightly out of alignment.
Her refined visual language, black humor, and experimental passage across landscape and sound freely rework literary imagination and the legacy of classical cinema. They shift Palestinian memory, territory, and history from linear order into nonlinear time, releasing viewers from any fixed image of Palestine. Her frames are political sites where violence and memory, colonialism and everyday life continually collide, reconfiguring the distribution of the sensible. Rather than reproducing tragedy, al-Sharif has expanded Palestine as a territory of images beyond national borders, enacting a politics of the screen that responds to history and violence. She is the artist farthest from Palestine, and at the same time the one who maps the coordinates of its closest images.

Home Movies Gaza

Basma al-SHARIF
Palestine | 2013 | 25min | DCP | Color | 15
Home Movies Gaza introduces the Gaza Strip as a microcosm of civilization’s failure. Seeking to portray everyday life in a place where even the most basic human rights remain out of reach, it adopts a perspective from within the domestic spaces of a territory that is complex, derelict, and inseparable from its political identity.

CAPITAL

CAPITAL

Basma al-SHARIF
Germany, Italy | 2023 | 17min | HD | Color | Korean Premiere | 19
As Egypt sinks deeper into poverty and mounting debt, new cities rise across the country while prisons fill with dissenting voices. Who are these cities built for, what desires or ambivalence do they inspire, and at what cost? Since such questions cannot be voiced safely, a ventriloquist, songs, and advertisements evoke an apparently bygone age of fascism. Referencing the Telefoni Bianchi films that preceded Mussolini’s propaganda cinema, the work turns the enduring legacy of constructing new capitals into material for expressing political criticism and fragile hope through satire.

A Field Guide to the Ferns

Basma al-SHARIF
UK | 2015 | 9min | HD | Color | 15
“Primitive savagery meets the brutality of the modern world in Ruggero Deodato’s timeless work of visceral horror.” Cannibal Holocaust is revived deep in the New Hampshire woods, where apathy and violence blur into one another.

High Noon

Basma al-SHARIF
Japan, USA | 2015 | 32min | HD | Color | Korean Premiere | 12
High Noon brings together the landscape of Southern California and that of southeastern Onomichi, Japan, evoking the gravitational pull toward the centre of the Earth and the awareness that we sometimes stand upside down on the world. Each landscape appears only briefly, unfolding through a dizzying series of loops that seem to repeat without end.

DEEP SLEEP

Basma al-SHARIF
Malta, Greece | 2014 | 13min | HD | Color | 15
Temporarily barred from travelling to the Gaza Strip, the filmmaker practises autohypnosis to inhabit multiple places at once. Set to field recordings transformed into binaural beats, Deep Sleep gathers a year of bilocation sessions shot on Super 8. Moving through ancient ruins embedded in a modern civilization in ruins, it draws on historical avant-garde cinema to invite a collective passage across landscapes and beyond geographical borders, exchanging memory for an immediate, visceral present.

Farther than the Eye Can See

Basma al-SHARIF
UAE | 2012 | 13min | HD | Color | Korean Premiere | 15
In a story with no known ending, tracing events becomes a journey backwards toward a place that no longer exists. Farther Than the Eye Can See presents the Emirates as a new, uninhabited urban landscape carrying a vague promise of something better. Against it, a woman recounts the Nakba from arrival to departure. What lies ahead remains unseen, while the past fades into memory.

The Story of Milk and Honey

Basma al-SHARIF
Lebanon | 2011 | 10min | HD | Color | 12
An anonymous man recounts his failed attempt to write an apolitical love story in Beirut. As fact and fiction are delicately woven together, the fragments form a story of their own. A tale of defeat expands into a layered journey through the ways we gather information, interpret facts, and reshape history to satisfy our desires.

Barrier-free Screening Program

Between the Notes

KIM Kyuwon
South Korea, Germany | 2026 | 25min | DCP | Color |
World Premiere | 12
A hand trims its nails short to the sound of a machine. Piano notes overlap the image, and the same hand settles on the keys. The playing soon stops; a brief sigh reveals Hyekyung’s face. She is the filmmaker’s mother, who gave up the piano thirty years ago and now returns to it. The filmmaker moves between Hyekyung’s space and Jueun’s life studying piano in Germany. As their hands overlap, the film asks how the body preserves time, memory, and gestures.

Da Don Ta

HAN Sori
South Korea | 2026 | 33min | DCP | B&W | World Premiere | 12
If Mom had been able to hear well, would I still have fallen in love with cinema?“ I used to feel ashamed of the strange speech patterns and facial expressions that surfaced only when communicating with my mother. Cinema was the new language I chose to break free from her will and claim my independence. Using film as my reason, I stopped acting as her surrogate, and only then did her world slowly come into view. Yet, our communication remains trapped in a cycle of misunderstandings and missed connections.

A Pastor in a Cannabis Field

LEE Soojung
South Korea | 2026 | 22min | DCP | Color | World Premiere | 15
A pastor with Parkinson’s disease begins to dream again in the cannabis fields. Growing cannabis in a government-designated cultivation zone, he works to provide medical cannabis to patients like himself and advocates for its legalization.

The DMZ International Documentary Film Festival has created barrier-free versions of films from its Korean official selection, fostering an environment in which audiences with and without disabilities can enjoy the program together. This year, three Korean short documentaries have been selected: Da Don Ta, A Pastor in a Cannabis Field, and Between the Notes.
Each film centers on protagonists who communicate through a different form of language. As they work to close the distances between them, their exchanges give rise to moments of communication that are at once ordinary and deeply moving. Once again presented in collaboration with the Siloam Center for the Blind, the Barrier-free Screening Program seeks to create a space of togetherness where everyone can experience cinema without discrimination.

* All program details, schedules, and guest attendance are subject to change.
* Interpretation will be provided only for events specifically marked as offering it.

Master Class

A class program offering an opportunity to hear leading masters who have transformed the aesthetics of documentary cinema discuss their philosophies, worldviews, and approaches to creation.

* Approx. 90 minutes

1 Kamal Aljafari: The Image Struggle for Cinematic Justice

Kamal Aljafari, whose films transform geopolitical questions into matters of cultural identity, discusses “cinematic justice”: reclaiming images seized by the occupier and restoring them to their rightful place.

Moderator JANG Byungwon

It's a Long Way from Amphioxus

2 Basma al-Sharif: Far from Palestine, Close to Images

Moving between the cinema screen and the white cube, Basma al-Sharif's practice imaginatively constructs images of Palestine from outside Palestine, remapping familiar territories in strange and unexpected ways. This master class examines an artistic practice that moves beyond the representation of tragedy to continually expand Palestine as a territory of images.

Club Cinema

Club Cinema is an event combining screenings and critical discourse, led by programmers from microcinemas and community cinemas that enrich the landscape of film culture. Participating organizers select works from the festival lineup and independently curate and host their own programs. This year, four active groups— Lothringen, SALT, and Image Book—take part in Club Cinema.
* Approx. 90 minutes
* Korean only (no interpretation provided)

1 Lothringen: How to Look at the Sky There is a sky within the frame. This simple form often carries the stigma of being demanding, or overly conceptual, cinema. Before us are ten images of the sky. From what position, and through what method, did the filmmaker arrive at them? That is the first question. The second is simpler: how might we enjoy this film simply, purely, as something to be seen and heard? HostIL hwan (Programmer, Lothringen), PARK Kyujae (Programmer, Lothringen) DateSep 13 (Sun) 16:30 (after the screening of Ten Skies) VenueMEGABOX Kintex 4 * Lothringen: A film collective composed of filmmakers, Lotringen introduces contemporary and personal films made outside conventional industry structures. Its programs encompass works situated in the gray area between documentary and experimental film, as well as films that reveal the world through a continuum of images rather than verbal narration.	2 SALT: What It Means to Watch Together — From Screening to Communing Taking the screenings of Afterlives and Recording with Mother "Working Hands" as a starting point, we consider together the process by which a film reaches the screen, and what remains once it is over. The four programmers behind this program have each created spaces for collective viewing in different ways—running venues, curating, organizing screenings around social issues, and developing small-scale film programs. By sharing their experiences and concrete examples, they will discuss the possibilities and challenges that arise when screening is understood as a communal practice. HostMaya WEST (Founder, SALT), LEAM Sooyoung (Independent Curator), KIM Hannah (Organizer, "Films for Freedom" screening series), LEE Hajin (Organizer, "SALT Cinema" screening series) DateSep 12 (Sat) 16:10 (after the screening of Essay Compilation 3) VenueMEGABOX Kintex 8 * SALT: SALT is a space, a project, an experiment, an essential mineral, and an independent venue that takes leaps of faith. Hosting a wide range of activities across the visual arts, including screenings, it embraces diversity of genre while placing process and questions at its center, continually seeking new forms of evolution.	3 Image Book: The Conditions of Youthness Between the abandonment of childhood and the duties of adulthood, this program considers what “youthness” might mean in film and documentary. HostGEUM Dong-hyeon, YU Pyeong-in, YOON So-hee, LEE Ra-jin (Image Book) DateSep 15 (Tue) 16:30 (after the screening of I Heard That They Are Not Going to See Each Other Anymore) VenueMEGABOX Kintex 4 * Image Book: Founded by members of the Archive Daegu Film, Imagebook was established to foster a vibrant film culture in Daegu. It screens a wide range of films that receive little circulation in Korea, and particularly in Daegu, while organizing related events. It also introduces books and publications on cinema.

DMZ Docs Forum

Inspired by this year’s festival slogan, “Peace Is Not Silent,” the 2026 DMZ Docs Forum was conceived as a platform for engaging with urgent and fiercely debated issues shaping documentary culture in Korea and around the world. This year’s program reflects the festival’s aspiration to serve as an open space where diverse perspectives and freedom of expression can flourish without restriction. We hope it will encourage speakers, filmmakers, and audiences alike to exchange ideas openly and engage in candid discussion.

Forum Co-hosted with the Korean Film Council: Future Strategies for Documentary

Against the backdrop of rapidly changing distribution platforms and market demand, this forum reconsiders the position and social value of documentary cinema. It will also provide an opportunity to share insights into the current landscape of the domestic and international documentary market, explore the genre’s capacity to embrace diverse forms, and seek new ways for documentaries to connect with audiences.

Main Forum: Political Documentary Today

The majority of the five highest-grossing Korean documentaries of 2025 were political documentaries. The proliferation of films driven by intense political engagement, partisan conflict, or direct intervention in specific political issues prompts a broader question: how is the political dimension of documentary constituted, and how does it operate? This question arises between the cinema of politics and the politics of cinema, and between the content and form of documentary as both political expression and practice. The Forum of 18th DMZ Docs, “Political Documentary Today,” was conceived as one response to this question. Organized with the participation of Critics’ Choice, DMZ Docs’ program for critical discourse on Korean documentary cinema, the forum begins with a fundamental question—“What makes a documentary political?”—and examines the practices, issues, and aesthetics of documentaries that engage with politics.

International Forum: The Dilemma of Cultural Boycotts

The geopolitical crisis that began with the war in Ukraine has extended to Gaza and Iran, cutting through the heart of international affairs, cultural politics, and artistic practice. Within the sphere of state-led cultural administration, including festival institutions, the complex relationships between activism, freedom of expression, and the responsibilities of artists have become the subject of intense debate. Although Korea once appeared relatively distant from these discussions, several recent controversies—including debate over the screening of Israeli film at the Jeonju International Film Festival and the art world’s boycott of the Centre Pompidou Hanwha project—have opened the conversation domestically. Within the festival sector, the debate intensified after the Cannes Film Festival’s boycott of Russian films in 2022. The International Documentary Film Festival Amsterdam and the Berlin International Film Festival have likewise faced controversy over their public positions on Gaza. What does it mean to boycott works of art and culture on political grounds? This forum raises the question and brings together a range of perspectives.

38-Second Documentary Contest

We’re Cheering On Your Courage
The 38-Second Documentary Contest encourages anyone to create a documentary-style video without restrictions on form, helping broaden public engagement with documentary. This year’s theme, “We’re Cheering On Your Courage,” resonates with the slogan of the 18th DMZ International Documentary Film Festival, “Peace Is Not Silent.” Documentary has long stood with acts of friendship and solidarity, recording suffering and courageous voices. A single act of courage may not change everything, but small gestures can move us closer to the kind of day we wish to live. Participants are invited to capture an everyday experience in which their actions brought about positive change—such as yielding to an ambulance or clearing litter in their neighborhood—in a video lasting 38 seconds, or up to 60 seconds.

Youth Documentary Production Workshop

Now in its 16th year, the Youth Documentary Production Workshop is a flagship filmmaking education program that promotes media literacy through documentary production, discovers outstanding youth content, and nurtures the documentary filmmakers of the future.

Ten teams of young people from Gyeonggi Province took part in a ten-week production course under the guidance of professional documentary filmmakers. Their completed works will be screened during the festival, offering audiences an opportunity to discover promising youth documentaries and encounter a new generation of documentary creators.

I Saw Something Shining Inside

Team: Dajaebo | Mentor: HEO Chulnyung |
School: Yeoncheon High School,
Korea Animation High School

Eighteen-year-old Sohee is a reporter for the independent youth media outlet Tokkipul and a volunteer teacher at Nodeul Night School for the Disabled. While covering sites of protest, she sometimes doubts whether the world can truly be changed. Then she encounters the teenage martyrs who stayed to the end at the South Jeolla Provincial Office during the Gwangju Uprising of May 1980. Ashamed by the thought that she would have fled, Sohee begins writing candid letters in an effort to understand what they felt—and sets out in search of the things that still shine.

Dream?

Team: Frame Teens | Mentor: CHOI Jong-ho |
School: Seongbo Business High School

Taeun once abandoned a dream but has decided to pursue it again. Seoyun carries the memory of giving up one dream while following another. Ro-a continues to search for hers. The three enter the design department of a vocational high school and, despite sharing the same school life, pursue their own paths in different ways. Their journeys here are far from easy, as the wall of reality stands between them and their dreams.

NoMaJiJi

Team: Timeless | Mentor: CHOI Jong-ho |
School: Buyong High School

This documentary follows a grandmother who once worked at a university hospital and now earns a living as a street vendor, a mother who continues to work at a hospital, and older people who return to work even after retirement. For them, labor is more than a means of survival: it is a place where they remain connected to society and affirm their own worth. As the saying nomajiji—“an old horse knows the way”—suggests, their experience and wisdom prompt the film to question the meaning of mandatory retirement in an age of hundred-year lives and to seek ways of living well together.

School: Goyang Jayuschool

Three students at K Alternative School share one thing in common: all have undergone orthodontic treatment. None had questioned it before, but as the pressures of preparing for high school begin to fill their schedules, the painful and inconvenient treatment becomes increasingly bothersome. Then a question bursts out, sounding partly like a complaint and partly like something long felt: “Why do we straighten our teeth?” The three students behind the camera decide not to let the question pass.

With the god?

Team: One Apple | Mentor: MYOUNG Sohee |
School: Maehyang Girls Information High School

The film begins with three nonreligious students at a mission school wondering whether God exists. To find an answer, they search online and question the people around them. In the end, the three realize that what matters most is believing in themselves.

Dear my school

Team: Re:Docu | Mentor: MYOUNG Sohee |
School: Gwangmyeong YMCA Byeopssi

Gwangmyeong YMCA Byeopssi is Korea’s first alternative elementary school. It now faces multiple challenges due to the redevelopment of the Gwangmyeong–Siheung third-phase new town and a declining student population. At Byeopssi, we ask what it means for students to act for themselves, to help one another, and to build a better society. This is not a school that ranks people solely by their grades. We hope its educational values will not disappear. So we reflect on the problems facing our school and ask: can our concerns reach the wider world?

From Eco Club Member to an S-Rank Earth Protector?!

Team: Green Buddy | Mentor: KIM Seok |
School: Hanbitnuri Middle School

The story begins with a question: “Why should we protect the environment?” While plogging in the streets, the members of Green Buddy confront the severity of environmental problems and the lack of public awareness. Birdwatching then reveals how precious the biodiversity of their own community is. Realizing that the collapse of any ecosystem, large or small, ultimately affects human life, they close their record by looking beyond club activity to a simple message: protecting the environment begins with small actions in everyday life.

Team: Moment Catchers | Mentor: KIM Boram |
School: Maehyang Girls Information High School

A group of friends live with different concerns. The causes and forms of their worries vary, but each leaves a distinct “trace” in the mind. We pick up the camera to look more closely into one another’s hearts.

Asking AI for Help

Team: Team Choiseon | Mentor: HEO Chulnyung |
School: Maehyang Girls Information High School

In an age when people share their worries with AI rather than friends, three students set out to discover whether following AI’s advice can actually solve their problems. Each speaks honestly about a personal concern, asks AI for help, and develops a plan based on its suggestions. After carrying out the challenges for a week, will their worries be resolved?

Asian Docs Co-production Network Project

Launched in 2015 and now in its sixth cycle, the Asian Docs Co-production Network Project brings together emerging documentary filmmakers from universities in five countries—Korea, Taiwan, Japan, China, and Thailand—to collaborate over two years on documentaries about Asia. The four project teams formed last year have developed and produced works that cross perspectives particular to each country while capturing cultural experience shared across Asia.

At the 18th DMZ International Documentary Film Festival, the four participating teams present four films that view Asian cultures from fresh perspectives and register the significance of collaboration across the barrier of language.

The Mudball

Director: HIRAOKA Mao
School: Nagoya University of the Arts
Information: Japan | 22min | DCP | Color
Topic: The distance to something far away

The Mudball is a documentary that begins with a mud ball given by a childhood friend from whom the filmmaker was separated, reflecting the notions of distance and the presence of others. Living in Japan, filmmaker Mao traces her own memories of mobility through the mud ball she received from a childhood friend she can no longer meet. At the same time, through an international co-production with friends living far away, she realizes that she has never met any of them in person. The distance between "a friend she can no longer meet" and "friends she has not yet met" gradually converges into a single question, transcending both time and space. Through childhood memories, a virtual yet visual representation of walking, and a chain of images evoked by the mud ball, Mao moves between past and present, reality and imagination. Through this narrative journey, she reconsiders the distance between herself, others, and the world amid lost connections and new encounters, ultimately discovering new possibilities for how we relate to one another.

Keep Rolling

Director: CHEN Yiqi, HAN Sori
School : The London School of Economics and Political Science, Yonsei University
Information: Korea, China | 21min | DCP
Topic: Personal documentary

A young filmmaker from Korea and another from China find themselves at similar crossroads despite growing up in different countries. As they look back on the moments that first inspired them to pursue cinema, they revisit childhood memories, formative encounters, and the dreams that once seemed certain. Consequently, the two begin to wonder whether they can truly call themselves filmmakers. Will they be able to find the answer to that question? This film depicts a journey that begins with that question and returns to it.

A POT ON THE HILL

Director: Napat UNNANAN (Juno), SHIN Yul, LEE Sanha, Prem PLITTAPOLKRANPIM (Foi)
School: Chulalongkorn University, Korea National University of Arts
Information: Korea, Thailand | 29min | 4K
Topic: Urban documentary

“Breathes, the unceasing vitality, revealed by two remote villages in two of Asia’s two secluded villages.”
As residents of these vanishing villages prepare to say goodbye, their daily lives serve as metaphors for the past, connecting the two cities across thousands of kilometers and decades. “Yangji Village” at Danggogae, the last station of Seoul Subway Line 4, and “Nang Loeng Village” in Thailand, home of a 100-year-old theater. These are two spaces facing rapid urban transformation. They are two villages situated between the sunken and protruding areas within the cities we inhabit. In these two villages, which are nearing their final moments, there are buildings and people who hold onto memories. They prove that cities are never clean and linear in shape, but rather imperfect and bounded. The villages show life, death, and everyday existence through memories.

Here and There

Director: Renee HUANG, Li Jing, Léo BROSSAT
School: Tainan National University of the Arts, Yunnan Arts University
Information: Taiwan, Vietnam | 28min | MOV
Topic: Immigration-Family

Renee was born in Taiwan to a Vietnamese mother who moved there after her marriage. Over the years, an unspoken distance has grown between them. Renee does not speak her mother's native language and knows little about her mother's life before Taiwan. Through a journey to Vietnam, Renee tries to get closer to her mother and better understand their relationship. Through Li Jing's photographs, Renee's footage, and Léo's perspective, Here and There brings together three viewpoints to explore family, migration, and the connections that remain between people separated by language, generations, and places. Here and There is a documentary about a mother and daughter searching for a way to reconnect, between the places they come from and the lives they have built.

Academy Program

The Academy Program provides documentary screening opportunities to students majoring in Film, Media, and Humanities, as well as film club members and researchers, through the issuance of Academy Badges.

Recommended titles selected by the DMZ Docs programmers serve as a foundation for in-depth documentary discourse, while a range of tailored program events enrich participants’ festival experience. Launched in 2022, the program has steadily expanded in both scope and scale. The Academy Program will mark a significant milestone in deepening awareness and understanding of documentary cinema and the festival itself.

Doc School 2026

Doc School is an online learning program grounded in the pedagogical value of documentary cinema. Each film comes with a worksheet designed to encourage open discussion and further study after viewing. Since its launch in 2020, the program has reached more than 320,000 participants and continues to receive a steady response in classrooms.

Free to use for elementary, middle, and high schools, youth organizations, families, and anyone else, Doc School released nine new short documentaries in 2026, together with accompanying materials that explore a range of social themes including peace, history, the environment, and education. All content is available at no charge on docuVoDA, an online streaming service dedicated to documentaries.

가치를 디자인하는 업사이클링

EVERYTHING HAS VALUE

버려진 자원에 새로운 가치를 더하고,
일상 속에서 제로웨이스트를 실천하는 문화를 만듭니다.

01

폐소재 회수

버려지는 커피 찌꺼기(커피박)를
직접 수거해 정처리합니다.

02

커피 펠릿 생산

커피 찌꺼기와 생분해 소재를 섞어
생분해 커피 펠릿을 만듭니다.

03

그리너보드 제작

커피 펠릿을 사용해
그리너 보드를 제작합니다.

그리너 커피 보드

직접 수거한 커피 찌꺼기와 생분해 소재로 만든 '그리너 커피 보드'는
아크릴과 나무를 대체하는 친환경 소재입니다.
버려지는 자원을 재활용해 폐기물을 줄이고, 사용 후에는 미생물에
의해 자연으로 돌아갑니다.
